Rescue Those Being Led Away To Death (Prov 24:11)

Truth & Accuracy

When does an unborn begin to feel pain? Is the pain the same as more mature humans feel?

Surely, these questions are best answered through science. Those answers are: at about 8 weeks gestation, and probably not.

In an article posted by Texas Right To Life, Dr. Maureen Condic speaks directly to these questions. Her words confirm once again that the abortion industry and its many supporters are not satisfied with any answers which shine the light of truth and scientific accuracy on their unfounded claims.

Equality vs Abortion

It is not possible to have equality in our nation while still supporting abortion.

Either abortion, which requires unborn children be treated differently from their born counterparts, must be eliminated, or striving for equality, which requires unborn children be treated the same as their born counterparts, must be eliminated.

Paul Stark details this subject in an article in National Right To Life News, Page 7. As usual he covers the topic with eloquence.

More Poor Thinking

The evolutionary biologist Jerry Coyne writes “If you are allowed to abort a fetus that has a severe genetic defect, microcephaly, spina bifida, or so on, then why aren’t you able to euthanize that same fetus just after it’s born?”

The question leads to the conclusion that infanticide is acceptable.

However, the question is based on the supposition “if you are allowed to abort...” It is there that the “logic” fails. In fact, it is allowing abortion in the first place that is wrong.

There is no justification for infanticide.

Finally!

Leana Wen, Planned Parenthood CEO, tweeted this, “First, our core mission is providing, protecting and expanding access to abortion and reproductive health care. We will never back down from that fight - it’s a fundamental human right and women’s lives are at stake. 8:31 AM, Jan 8, 2019

Previous PP leadership would not admit abortion was their primary activity and goal. Wen removed any doubt.

Unthinkable

Infanticide is killing a born baby. By every historical precedent it was and is murder.

Many of the foremost bioethicists have published papers suggesting, some forcefully, that infanticide is simply an extension of abortion. It is no big deal they say.

And now, members of the Virginia State Legislature along with the Governor have gone public with their support of abortion until the onset of labor or dilation. And they follow this with supporting non-care or non-resuscitation of abortions resulting in live births.

Fortunately, the legislative bill is dead for this session. But, in VA and NY such thinking is no longer unthinkable. And, Vermont, Rhode Island, and New Mexico are not far behind.

How have we managed to come from a background of total rejection to acceptance or at least considering it debatable? The leftward rush is clear. One has only to listen to the proposals of the growing community of presidential candidates.

Life in the Womb

If a picture is worth 1000 words, this video is worth 100,000 words.

“Me ...Still Me”

This group joins ultrasound photos with new born photos, adds the words Me to the ultrasound and Still Me to the new born photo and then sends them to legislators and others to demonstrate the humanity and personhood of both.

We wish we could be more helpful finding them on the net.

They are new and growing quickly.

It’s a Contradiction...

to accept and recruit men into the pro-abortion ranks as supporters of women’s rights, but to decry those in opposition to abortion with expressions like “no uterus, no opinion”.

A Vote for Infanticide

The “Born Alive Abortion Survivors Protection Act” (S.311) was defeated in the US Senate on Feb 25.

In another of his exceptional articles, Paul Stark identifies the erroneous and misleading statements which characterize the opposition’s thinking.

A Full Life

I lived inside mommy for 13 weeks and then God called me home.

“Baby Mike”, a person and a life, is honored and remembered by his parents. His mother’s story is brief but filled with the truths we know and use in our pro-life work. God is good. God is pro-life.
